D. C. ROBERTSON and J. C. C. BRENNER, of the Edmonton Cartage Co., have dissolved partnership. The business will be carried on by Mr. Robertson.

THE auction sale that was to have taken place last Tuesday at Fort Saskatchewan was postponed on account of the severe weather till Wednesday the 15th instant.

In Scotland last year the crop was so good that potatoes were exported to the United States, and an Ayrshire farmer got $25,000 for the produce of a hundred and fifty acres.

A. MCNICOL, who has been stationed at Fort Saskatchewan as a member of the police force for many years, is about to leave the force to open an accountant's office in Edmonton.

H. A. FINCH has sold 30 feet frontage on the north side of Jasper avenue between Ibbotson's fruit and confectionery store and Leclerc's butcher shop to F. B. KARRAN for $1,400. Mr. KARRAN has material on the ground for the erection of a building, which he will proceed with at once.

ROBERTSON's hall is being improved by the construction of an arch over the stage, which will admit of the arrangement of a curtain and scenery usual in a well appointed theatre. Jas. McDonald, contractor. The scenery and curtain have been received from Chicago, and are not excelled in style or taste in any city in Canada.

W. A. ALDWEIL who has been teller in the Imperial Bank at Edmonton ever since the branch was opened here, will leave for Brandon on Tuesday next to take a similar position there. His many friends will be sorry to learn of his removal and hope that he will return before long. A. R. B. HEARN, late of Prince Albert, will arrive on to night's train to replace Mr. Aldwell as teller in the Imperial bank here.

At the council meeting last night the tenders of W. Humberstone and J. Walter for running the Edmonton ferries for the coming season were considered. The former offered $500 for the running of the lower ferry, and the latter $10 for the running of both ferries. It was decided to accept Humberstone's offer, provided he furnished security, and to advertise for new offers for the upper ferry, to be received up to the 13th instant. It was decided to dispense with night watchman Peacock's services after the present month. The health committee recommended the report of the health officer requiring strict enforcement of the health by-laws and general preparation against cholera. Several accounts were passed. The council adopted the report of a special committee to the effect that Jasper avenue is 100 feet wide entirely across the McDougall estate. Full report of the proceedings in next issue.

THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

A revolution occurred in the Sandwich islands on January 17th, whereby the native queen was dethroned and a provisional government of foreigners formed headed by S. B. Dale. The provisional government has sent a deputation headed by a Mr. Thurston to Washington to ask for annexation to the United States. The natives of the Sandwich islands have been civilized for very many years, and for a considerable period carried on a constitutional government on the model of that of Britain. At the same time there has been a large influx of whites, chiefly from the United States and Britain, who have acquired large interests and attained a very great share of political influence. Indeed although the sovereign was a native the actual charge of affairs has been in the hands of the foreigners for a long time. There is considerable rivalry between the parties of foreigners respectively favoring British and United States interests as well as a joint rivalry with the natives for control. The native government has always been weak, and some years ago a small rebellion was organized in which a Canadian named Volney P. Ashford took a prominent part. Just how the trouble was settled it is hard to say, but at any rate it was settled leaving the native king on the throne but with the measure of foreign control considerably increased. Since the accession of the present queen there has been a constant effort on her part towards reactionary measures, that is towards more complete native control, which culminated on January 15th, when she attempted to get her cabinet to sign a new constitution disfranchising all foreigners and putting the government completely in the hands of the natives. The ministers refused and fled for their lives. They returned later and induced the queen to postpone her attempt. There was a public meeting in front of the palace and the queen announced the failure of her plans. A native orator demanded the lives of the ministers. The foreigners citizens met and formed a committee of public safety. The United States warship Boston landed 300 men to preserve order. On the 17th the committee of public safety issued a proclamation abrogating the monarchical form of government and declaring a provisional government for the purpose of carrying on public affairs until a treaty of annexation to the United States could be arranged. The queen refused to agree to the arrangement demanded by the provisional government and retired to her country residence. Her troops surrendered and the provisional government of foreigners is in control. The government of the United States apparently desires the annexation of the islands, while the government of Great Britain appears likely to refuse its consent, believing that it has interests there which require protection. It is possible that other European powers will enter a joint protest with Great Britain against annexation to the United States and either that serious trouble will ensue, or that there will be a joint protectorate. The islands are important in that they are exceedingly fertile, with a most salubrious climate, and particularly because they are a convenient stopping place on the steamship route between Vancouver and San Francisco and China and Australia in which route the United States and Great Britain are both deeply interested.

PEACE RIVER.

Thos. A. BRICK, son of the Church of England missionary of that name, arrived from Shaftsbury mission, Peace River, on Tuesday last, having travelled by dog train from Lesser Slave lake. He left Peace river on January 18th, with a horse and sleigh, with which he travelled to Lesser Slave lake. There he procured dog trains and two men and started for Edmonton on January 15th. The weather was very warm when he left Peace river, but the cold snap we have just experienced at Edmonton commenced the day after he left Slave lake and only ceased the day before he reached Edmonton. Although the weather was so bitter Mr. Brick and his men travelled every day and camped out every night without being even frost bitten. Mr. Brick brings with him some samples of grain raised last season at Shaftsbury mission, which are to be forwarded to the Indian commissioner for exhibition at the world's fair. The grain is not selected or picked, but is a most excellent sample well worthy of taking a place with the best Northwest can produce. The past season was rainy in July and August but the fall was dry and very fine. There was no summer frost on the river flats on which the mission farm and adjoining settlement is situated, but on the upland the season was more than usual excellent grain this season, principally wheat. Six acres of wheat yielded 35 bushels to the acre. This wheat has been threshed by the mission thrasher and is now being ground in the eight horse power grist mill of the mission. A Mackenzie retired H. B. officer, who is farming in the same locality, had over 600 bushels of grain. Of twelve half breeds settlers who are cultivating small patches of land near the mission ten had an average of twenty bushels of wheat each, with is being ground at the mill. The mission farm yielded 1,100 bus. of the mission mill free of charge. Besides grain the mission farm raised 250 large pumpkins which ripened fully, also a large quantity of cucumbers and Indian corn, the latter however was used green. Tomatoes were ruined by the cut worm in the spring. At Dunvegan, no wheat was sown, as the spring opened later than usual and it was thought that wheat would be too late. The crops sown however ripened well and yielded abundantly. Barley cutting began at the mission on August 15th and wheat on August 25th, both fully ripe. Besides grain, horses, cattle, pigs and poultry are raised at the mission. The hogs find enough pea vine to live on in the summer. Fall frosts began in the latter end of September and there was a severe snow storm in that month, but the weather turned fine and remained so during October. The winter snow fell in November, considerably earlier than usual, and the river froze on November 22nd, also earlier than usual. The weather was quite cold during the latter part of November and beginning of December, but turned fine about the 20th and remained very warm with thaws and rains until nearly the end of January. On the day following New Year's there was a very heavy rain, with a chinook wind blowing. The Indians are doing well this season, as rabbits are numerous. A good catch of fur in fox, bear and lynx is being made. There is no sickness amongst them. The Roman Catholic church is preparing to establish a mission and farm a few miles below Shaftsbury on the river and may remove from Dunvegan. Saskatoon berries were not as abundant last season as usual but other berries were plentiful.

In regard to the cattle disease said to exist amongst the cattle on the H. B. ranch south of Dunvegan, Mr. Brick says that it still exists and that at least one animal from the ranch died of it last season. Hitherto the disease has only appeared in the band located at the ranch 20 miles south of Dunvegan, where there was no danger of spreading the contagion to other cattle. But last fall several animals from that band were removed to the wintering stables on the trail between Lesser Slave lake and Peace river. These were driven through the mission settlement where one of them became so sick that it was left behind for some days. It was afterwards driven to Peace river crossing died there being unable to swim the river. The carcass was opened and showed two large tumors, one on each side of the wind pipe, just behind the breast bone. The lungs were decayed and had many dark spots on them, while the greater part of the substance of the lungs was quite white. Inside the lung cavity adhering to the ribs, were a number of hard tumors. The first symptoms of the disease are a cough and labored breathing, accompanied by a desire to rub the throat against some hard object as though to remove an irritation existing there. Although the disease has hitherto been confined to the H. B. ranch the other people in the district fear that it may be communicated to their cattle and are anxious to have the disease stamped out. Mr. Brick leaves for home to-morrow. This is his first trip out from Peace river since he went there in 1886.

RESERVES.

The people of Beaver Hills settlement claim that further settlement in that section of country is greatly hindered by a new regulation of the lands department which prevents the homesteading of timbered land, classified as such in the surveyors' reports. These reports are incorrect in many cases, and as a result valuable homesteads are being held without any good reason from settlers who would already have taken them up. The difficulty has no doubt arisen from the fact that the surveys having been made nearly ten years ago, do not describe accurately the condition of the country as it is to-day in regard to timber, as fires have converted much of what was heavily timbered land into clear prairie. Besides allowance must be made for the fact that surveys were made by contract, and were paid for according to a scale arranged on a basis of a fixed payment per mile for prairie, an additional amount for brush land and a further amount for woods. Naturally the surveyor in his report did not unduly minimize the proportion of wood land, or the size of the timber upon it. In view of these circumstances, which should be within the knowledge of the lands department if they are not, before taking such a serious step as refusing a would be settler the homestead which he desires, the least the department could do would be to officially inspect the land, so as to be sure whether or not the report of the surveyors was accurate. The arbitrary refusal of homesteads to a few intending settlers, may seem a small thing to the officials of the government, but it is not a small thing; it is the most severe blow that can be struck at immigration. It is what in 1882 turned the tide of immigration which was then flowing so strongly towards the Northwest, and which only after the lapse and loss of ten years is beginning to flow this way again. The sense of injustice felt by a man who is refused what he is on all hands led to believe himself entitled to, is very deep and will prejudice him more strongly against the place or country in which he is so dealt with, than any natural advantage will counterbalance. He argues: "No matter how good the country is, if it is only for my neighbor and not for me. I have no use for it?"

A few words as to the general policy of reserving wooded lands may not be out of place. In those parts of the Territories where wood is scarce such a course, if followed by a proper administration of those lands, is wise and in the public interest. But in this part of the country where wood is everywhere abundant, and particularly so throughout the greater part of the great area—about six townships square—known as the Beaver hills, the same necessity for reserving the timber does not exist, and the policy of doing so becomes a burden and a drawback instead of a benefit. This of course does not apply to spruce timber suitable for sawing, which is none too plentiful in any section of the Northwest. It is to be hoped that the lands department will see its way, while reserving the sawing timber, to give the settlers the full benefit of the common timber, and particularly to provide that nothing be allowed to stand in the way of any intending settler securing the spot of land which he desires. There is a rush to Northern Alberta now, but it should be remembered that one of the greatest assistants to the rush is the recent opening up of the C. P. R. as well as the government land to settlement on fixed terms. So that when a man sees the land he wants he knows at once, without haggling Jew fashion, on exactly what terms he may own it. To begin a policy of reserving desirable agricultural lands for any reason, is to do the country more harm than a thousand immigration agents can do it good. The best immigration agent is the settler who has secured the land he wants and who is able to point out to his former neighbors where they, too, may secure like land on like terms.

The important case of Longhead et al. vs. Praed et al, involving over $250,000, which has occupied the attention of the court at Calgary for over a month has been concluded, judgment reserved. The plaintiffs were shareholders in the Alberta and Athabasca Railway company and held an option on the balance of the stock which was held by Minneapolis parties. They transferred this option to the defendants, who were either to pay the plaintiffs or the Minneapolis shareholders. The defendants decided to deal with the Minneapolis people, but failed to do so. Meanwhile the C. & E. charter was obtained, which rendered the A. and A. charter useless. The plaintiffs then entered this action for damages. The defendants maintain that the agreement was subject to the construction of the road being undertaken. The evidence of the defendants was taken in England under commission. The plaintiffs, Messrs. Longhead, McCarthy and Reilly gave evidence in person. P. McCarthy, Q. C., plaintiffs counsel, occupied seven days in his argument. J.

S. Tupper, Q. C., replied in a four days' address. The case has been very keenly contested since its commencement three years ago, and the decision will be awaited with much interest. It is expected that in any event the case will be carried to the higher court.

MCCARTHY'S POLICY.

Dalton McCarthy's recent speech at Stayner, Ontario, contains the following on the tariff question:

"There appears, as one result of the policy which has prevailed with more or less success in building up our manufacturing industries, to be an antagonism created between the interests of the mercantile and agricultural pursuits—to which, perhaps, I might add lumbering and fishing—as against the manufacturing, or against a portion of the manufacturing industries, and the impression prevails that the present tariff favors the manufacturers, as admittedly to some extent it does, at the expense of the other industries, and more especially the agricultural interests. It is unnecessarily so if it is considered merely from the standpoint of a revenue producing tariff. When it is considered that the taxes range all the way from 20 to 100 per cent, it is idle to pretend that such a scale of taxation is necessary for revenue purposes. But it is not also true, and capable of demonstration, that the indirect tax, or, to put it in other words, the increased price of the articles which are manufactured owing to the high tariff, add very considerably to the burdens of the consumers, and brings up in the plainest possible manner the question whether the time has not now come for the consumers to say to the manufacturers:—"You must either carry on your business on more equal terms, or you must cease to carry it on at all. You have been permitted an opportunity of establishing your industries, that has been at the expense, more or less, of the vast bulk of the people, and you ought now to be prepared to stand alone and to withstand the ordinary competition to which your business, like that of all other occupations, may be exposed." It must be remembered, too, that some of those manufacturing industries have formed combinations, and that the competition which it was hoped would regulate the price of the home market does not prevail; and further, that the tendencies towards combinations amongst manufacturers is becoming more evident every day. We have all the cotton industries of the country under one management. The same may be said in connection with the manufacture of agricultural implements. Other examples might be given. These considerations have led me to the conclusion that the time has arrived for a complete revision of our customs laws. They should be simplified, equalized and what perhaps is more important, or certainly not less important, the duties should be materially reduced. This I may say is the key-note of the policy which, if I continue to be your representative, I shall advocate on the floor of parliament. I differ from the leader of the opposition, who desires, as I understand his statement, to uproot the national policy tree. I have no such ambition. On the contrary, if our manufacturing industries can live in a freer atmosphere, incidentally protected by the tariff which the revenue necessities require shall be imposed, I shall be too well pleased. And I shall be bitterly disappointed, and shall look upon the experiment of the national policy, if not as an absolute failure, as having failed to accomplish what its promoters anticipated, if the industries which have cost us so much to build up are to wither at the first blast to which they may be exposed in freer markets." Mr. McCarthy also favored preferential duties towards Great Britain and British colonies. On the school question, he objected to the decision of the privy council being interfered with. In conclusion he announced that he had left the party, not so much on a question of policy, as because he had not been consulted in the formation of the new cabinet. He would not join the opposition, as he did not believe in commercial union and could not act with a party which numbered annexationists amongst its members. The meeting concluded by a motion of confidence in Sir John Thompson's government which was defeated by an amendment expressing confidence in Mr. McCarthy.

HOME RULE.

The new Irish home rule bill declares that there shall be established in Ireland a legislative body consisting of the Queen and an Irish legislative body, empowered to make and repeal laws. The power to enact laws on the following subjects is retained by the Imperial parliament: "The status or dignity of the crown, or the succession to the crown, or a regency, the making of war or peace; the army, navy, militia, volunteers, or other military or naval forces, or the defence of the realm, treaties and other relations with foreign states, or the relations between the various parts of her majesty's dominions, offences against the law of nations or offences committed in violation of any treaty made or hereafter to be made between her majesty and any foreign state; or offences committed on the high seas, treason, alienage, or naturalization, trade, navigation or quarantine, and the postal and telegraph service except as hereafter in this act mentioned with respect to the transmission of letters and telegrams in Ireland."

A sub-clause retains to the Imperial parliament control for five years over land legislation.

The Irish legislature is restricted from passing any laws "respecting the establishment of religion, or imposing any privilege, or conferring any disability on account of religious belief or abrogating or derogating from the right to establish or maintain any place of denominational education, or denominational institution of charity, or prejudicially affecting the right of any child to attend a school receiving public money without attending the religious instruction at that school, or imparting without either the leave of Her Majesty-in-Council first obtained, on an address presented by the legislative body of Ireland, or the consent of the corporation interested, the rights, property or privileges of an existing corporation incorporated by royal charter or local and general act of parliament, or from enacting any legislation changing the terms of the home rule act, except insofar as the act is declared to be alterable by the Irish Legislature."

The Queen retains the same prerogatives with respect to summoning, proroguing and dissolving the Irish legislative body as the Queen has with respect to the Imperial parliament. The Irish legislative body can continue for five years, and no longer, from the day on which it was appointed to meet. The executive government of Ireland is to be carried on by the Lord Lieutenant on behalf of Her Majesty, with the aid of such officers and such council as to Her Majesty may from time to time seem fit.

An important new clause provides that 103 members of the Imperial parliament shall be elected by existing constituencies. These members shall vote on all questions reserved by the Imperial parliament from the Irish legislative body and may also sit in the Irish legislative body, if elected thereto, as well as in the Imperial parliament.

If the Queen signifies to the Irish legislature that a state of war exists, the Irish legislature may make extra appropriations for the army and navy, and to aid in the defence of the realm, but "it shall not be lawful for the Irish legislature body to adopt or pass any vote, resolution, address or bill for the raising or appropriation for any purpose of any part of the public revenue of Ireland, or of any tax, duty or impost except in pursuance of a recommendation from Her Majesty, signified through the Lord Lieutenant, in the session in which such vote, resolution, address or bill is proposed."

The Dublin metropolitan police force is to continue subject to the Lord Lieutenant for a period of five years, or until the Irish administration will guarantee that an adequate local police system has been organized. The Royal Irish Constabulary, while it exists, is to continue subject to the control of the Lord Lieutenant, but the Irish legislature may provide for the establishment and maintenance of a police force in counties and boroughs in Ireland under the control of the local authorities and arrangements may be made between the treasury and the Irish government for the establishment and maintenance of police reserves.

There is an entirely new clause (22) which gives the Crown the right to veto all bills of the Irish legislature, and gives Irish representative peers the right to sit in the House of Lords at Westminster, and vote on all imperial questions. Controversies regarding constitutional questions are to be referred to the judicial committee of the privy council for decision. The functions of the Lord Lieutenant are the same as in the bill of 1886 and the judiciary is to remain for five years under the control of the Imperial government, then to pass under the control of the Irish government.
